

Military Honors for Ernie Schaaf

Here is the funeral cortege of Ernie Schaaf, Boston boxer who died following a bout with Primo Carnera at New York, shown as it proceeded through the streets of Sheltonville to St. Mary's Church at Wrentham, Mass., where services were held for the fighter. Wrentham Post of the American Legion formed a guard of honor, and a firing squad from Boston Navy Yard fired three volleys.

Recapture of Stolen Warship

The bomb you see exploding here on board the Dutch warship, De Zeven Provinciën, took a toll of 22 dead and 25 injured. The bomb was dropped on the ship by a Dutch plane after mutineers, who had overpowered their officers, had stolen the ship and held it for several days. The stoler battleship was overtaken in the Indian Ocean after a chase which began at Kuta Raja, Sumatra.

Dead Kaiser Aide

Admiral Hubert von Rebeur-Paschwitz, former adjutant general to ex-Kaiser Wilhelm of Germany, who recently died of pneumonia at Dresden, Germany, at the age of 69. From 1898 to 1902 he was naval attache at the German Embassy at Washington. He also commanded the German naval squadron which visited the United States in 1912.

Captured Roosevelt's Would-Be Assassin

Here are the three Miami policemen credited with the capture of Giuseppe Zangara, the crazed Italian who attempted to assassinate President-elect Roosevelt, and saved him from the infuriated crowd. Patrolman Clarke (center) is holding the gun which missed its main objective but wounded five others.

Heroine of Miami Shooting

Frau Winifred Wagner, English-born widow of Siegfried Wagner, son of the famous composer, who, according to her relatives, may marry Adolf Hitler, Nazi Chancellor of Germany. Hitler and Frau Wagner, who have been friends for years, met recently at the memorial services for Richard Wagner at Leipzig, but, contrary to expectations, the bachelor Chancellor did not announce their betrothal.

Mrs. W. F. Cross, of Miami, Fla., whose courageous action in grappling with Giuseppe Zangara while he was firing his pistol at the President-elect undoubtedly saved Mr. Roosevelt from injury and possible death. Mrs. Cross grabbed the assassin's wrist when he began firing and deflected the bullets intended for the President. The plucky woman kept her grip upon the man until he was secured by officers.

Deadshot Co-ed

This modern Diana, skilled with high-powered rifle instead of the romantic bow and arrow, is Miss Evelyn Kerr, captain of the George Washington University rifle team, at the national capital. She is shown here at practice for a telegraphic match with a Philadelphia rifle team, and, in passing, let us say we wouldn't want to offend Miss Kerr.

Cool Majesty

There's no danger of this charming queen getting "hot and bothered" over the affairs of state, for she has a nice, cool throne. She is Miss Mabel White, of Petoskey, Mich., who is pictured in all her majesty as she reigned over the recent Winter Carnival in her home town. The throne was carved from hard-packed snow.

May Be Minister

Ruth Bryan Owen, Florida Congresswoman, who, it is reported, is being considered for the post of United States Minister to Denmark when the administration of President-elect Roosevelt takes office. Should Mrs. Owen be appointed as envoy, she will be the first woman ever to hold a diplomatic post in U. S. history.

Held For Bond Theft

Omaha police said Ray Winger 19, of Boise, Ida., confessed theft of $230,000 worth of Idaho state bonds from a Boise printing house. He said he would not fight extradition from Nebraska. (Associated Press Photo)

Mustn't Miss This Miss

In tennis, this might be called an overhead smash, and even here it would have been a smash if Bobby Vernon (left) had failed to catch Gwen Stone, who is enacting the role of human tennis ball, before the first bounce. Gwen, the very personification of grace, is shown soaring over the net on a court at Coral Gables, Fla., after being catapulted into the air by the two stalwarts at right.

In a Big Hurry

W. Water's F-Fine

John Ashoo, 43, of Yonkers, N. Y., doesn't care what he does with his time—and here you see him showing a polar bear something that would give said polar bear a chill in short order. John is swimming in the Hudson River, near his home town, and shoving away the ice cakes that impede his progress.

You'd be in a hurry, too, if the nice, warm water were waiting for you just to plunge in. That is why Leila Quinn is sprinting down the sands at Palm Beach, Fla. She is the daughter of E. V. Quinn, of Shrewsbury, N. J., and is one of the most popular of the very young set in the fashionable resort.

The Jump of a Champion

The mythical cow that jumped over the moon had nothing on Roy Mikkelson, who is shown here as he won the national amateur ski-jumping championship at Salisbury, Conn. Mikkelson, who jumped 43 meters, learned the A-B-C of skiing in his native Norway.
